Postgraduate students are invited to take part in this joint BAICE and UKFIET sponsored conference that aims to raise student awareness of and participation in the debate on envisioning a post-2015 Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) framework. The conference wishes to engage postgraduate researchers in communicating their views on current progress on the MDGs in relation to education.

We welcome abstracts relating to the following:

- international education and development experience since 2000;
- current development trends and challenges, and future scenarios impacting the definition of the post-2015 education framework;
- Possible scope and shape of education within the post-2015 agenda. We particularly welcome contributions on how progress towards greater education quality and equity can be achieved, including how and what goals and targets need to be defined and owned and how government accountability may be increased.
